'Computer Cop' on duty

Sheriff's Office to provide Internet security software to Taylor County parents

By CALEN MCKINNEY
reporter@cknj.com

Parents will soon have access to another tool in an arsenal to protect their children. And that tool will be free.

Taylor County Sheriff's Detective Brian Pickard says his office can purchase Internet monitoring software for $5 and will soon buy 1,000 copies of it to provide free to Taylor County parents.

Inmate rescues woman from abduction

'It just kind of looked suspicious. I knew he was up to no good.'

CALEN MCKINNEY
reporter@cknj.com

He says he knew something wasn't right. And others say his instincts might have saved a woman's life.

Campbellsville Police investigated an attempted sexual assault and abduction last Monday at about 2 p.m. at Old Greensburg Road.

A news release states that a female resident was walking home from work when a man driving a four-door sedan approached her.

At the same time, Chris Tuttle, an inmate housed at the Taylor County Detention Center, and city street department worker Randy Spurling were in the same area waiting for some others to arrive so they could begin installing street lights.

Tuttle, 28, originally from Montgomery County, spends the majority of his days working in the community.

Serving a sentence for third-degree burglary, Tuttle says he enjoys working and enjoys being outside. The work helps pass the time, he says.

But last Monday, Tuttle said he and Spurling were meant to be where they were.

Tuttle said he noticed the woman walking down the side of the road and saw a vehicle approach the woman. The driver was asking for directions, Tuttle said, because he saw the woman pointing to

October is Cyber Security Awareness Month

'If it sounds like a deal is too good to be true, it probably is.'

lmoore@cknj.com

It is estimated that 94 percent of American homes now have a computer, and there are 2.3 billion Internet users around the globe. People use the Internet daily to shop for everything from organic skincare products to pizza, to pay bills, and to let everyone in their social circle know what they're up to with social media sites like Facebook and Twitter. But the convenience of having instant access to everything at your fingertips is not without risk. Internet users of all ages are at risk of having their credit card numbers stolen, destructive viruses placed on their computer, or being sexually exploited.

October has been declared National Cyber Security Awareness Month by the National Cyber Security Alliance, and the organization's mission is to offer resources that educate Internet users on how to enjoy the Internet without compromising their safety.

According to Taylor County Sheriff's detective Brian Pickard, children are primary targets for sexual exploitation on the Internet. And because it is not uncommon for a child to be more computer-savvy than their parents, it is difficult for parents to find out just what their children are doing when online.

"The problem with the Internet is that back in the older days [before computers], pedophiles were having to find children at playgrounds and outside elementary schools," Pickard said, "But now they have access and anonymity. They can slip past the parents right into the child's bedroom."

Receiving, distributing, or being found in possession of pornographic images is a violation of federal law, and convicted offenders face harsh penalties.

Taylor County is not exempt from sexual predators who target children online.

"So far, the sheriff's office has a 100 percent conviction rate on every one of these cases, but the damage to the child has already been done," said Pickard, who also serves on the Internet Crimes Against Children (ICAC) task force, and the U.S. Secret Service task force.

To combat Internet predators, these task forces monitor networks on the Internet, scour for people trading child pornography, and also frequently go undercover in chat rooms by posing as minors. Pickard recalled a recent instance when he logged into a chat room posing as a 12-year-old girl. Within 45 seconds, 34 adults initiated contact.

"It's an everyday, uphill battle, but you've got to do something. You've got to let people know you're there."

Campbellsville Police Chief Tim Hazlette said that one of the best things parents can do to protect their children is to make sure the family computer is in an open area, and to never let a child have one in their bedroom.

Obama, Romney face off for presidency

When heading to the polls in less than four weeks, voters will be asked to choose who they want to lead the United States for the next four years.

Democratic incumbent Barack Obama wants the job again, while Republican nominee Mitt Romney wants to take it from him.

Obama and Romney and running mates Joe Biden and Paul Ryan, respectively, have squared off recently during public debates to allow the voters to see where they stand on the issues. A story about a recent forum discussing the presidential candidates, hosted by Campbellsville University, appears on Page 6 of today's issue.

Barack Obama

Obama's campaign website, www.barackobama.com, includes his stance on many issues, from taxes and innovation to nation-building at home, energy, education, health care and more.

In regards to taxes, the website states, Obama is investing in education, research and technology to grow the economy for the long term.

"Manufacturing is an essential building block of our economy because it sparks innovation, generates higher-wage jobs, and strengthens entire communities," the website states.

After declining for more than a decade, the manufacturing sector has rebounded, which the site states was led by Obama's rescue of the auto industry, and created half a million manufacturing jobs in the past two and a half years.

"To build on this recovery, President Obama set a goal to create 1 million new manufacturing jobs by the end of 2016 and is working to double American exports over the next five years by promoting U.S. goods and removing trade barriers, expanding access to credit, and promoting strong growth."

The site states that Obama has cut taxes for every American worker and provided 18 tax cuts for small businesses to help them weather the recession.

"Now, he's calling on millionaires and billionaires to pay a little bit more so that we can pay down our debt in a balanced where the driver needed to go. The woman then walked away, Tuttle said, but the vehicle approached her again.

"That caught my attention," he said.

Tuttle said the driver drove away again, but then pulled over, got out of his vehicle and removed his pants. He said the driver then drove to where the woman was walking.

The actions made Tuttle and Spurling very suspicious, and the two moved closer to the vehicle so they could watch the driver.

"I said, 'Let's just watch this feller. He's not acting right,'" Tuttle said.

Spurling agreed. "It just kinda looked suspicious. I knew he was up to no good."

The driver approached the woman again, Tuttle said.

"He just jerked her in the car," he said.

Tuttle said he then ran to the car and pulled the woman out of the vehicle. The driver quickly drove away.

Tuttle said he wasn't able to get the driver's license plate number but is able to describe him. The driver was a white male, he said, about 30 years old with short brown hair and stubble.

And when Tuttle saw the man, he noticed the man was completely nude. Having been given the opportunity to, Tuttle said, he likely would have struck the man.

"I ain't gonna lie," Tuttle said. "[I was] pretty mad."

Tuttle and Spurling drove the woman home and told her to lock her doors and call the police.

"She was tore up," Tuttle said. "She was crying. Very emotional."

Tuttle said he was glad to be able to help the woman.

"I feel good about it. I sure do," he said. "I wish I could have got him."

Spurling agreed. "I'm just glad we're there," Spurling said. "We didn't do nothing nobody else [wouldn't] have done."

As someone who has served jail time with other criminals, Tuttle said, the man's behavior was very suspicious to him.

"I've been locked up with enough sickos to know. He asked too many questions," he said. "I ain't perfect, but that's just some sick stuff."

Spurling said, "I just kind of feel we were in the right place at the right time."

Tuttle agrees but says he believes there is another reason he and Spurling were there to help the woman.

"I think God had something to do with it," he said. "We was the only two people there and she just happened to be walking down that road."

Tuttle said he has a daughter, who is 5 years old, and will encourage her to always protect herself when in public.

Campbellsville Police Chief Tim Hazlette said not all people would have helped someone in the woman's situation. He said it is encouraging to know that there is still some goodness in people today.

Hazlette said officers have interviewed Tuttle and Spurling but they haven't been able to identify the driver. "I was hopeful that we would but we haven't," Hazlette said. He said he knows of no other reports about similar incidents in the area. If the driver isn't from Taylor County, Hazlette said, he likely won't come back.

Hazlette said the woman was talking on a cell phone during the incident, which could be good and bad.

It could be good, he said, because a person could tell the other person on the phone that they are being attacked and to get help. But it could be bad, he said, because it might distract a person and lessen their instincts.

"The telephone was a distraction," Hazlette said. "It could have subdued her natural instincts."

Hazlette recommends that all people be aware of what is going on around them while they are in public. This incident, he said, happened in a somewhat secluded area, but a place the woman was familiar with, as she lives nearby.

"Always be aware of your surroundings," he said.

Hazlette said Tuttle might have saved the woman's life.

"We don't know exactly how this would have gone. Without question, he saved her from physical harm."

"Thank goodness he was there. His instincts were correct."

Hazlette also recommends that people leave a situation if they feel uncomfortable.

"If you don't know folks, I don't care how nice they are, play it safe."

Hazlette said he believes the woman is doing fine and has returned to work.

As policy, the News-Journal doesn't identify the victims of crimes and the name of the woman hasn't been released. A phone call requesting an anonymous interview with the woman hadn't been returned at press time.

Tuttle will soon be released and placed on home incarceration. He said he wants the community to know that inmates aren't all bad.

He is serving his time in Taylor County with other Class D inmates, people convicted of the least severe type of felony crimes. The Department of Corrections will only allow Class D felons who are eligible to work in the communities in which they are incarcerated. As such, Tuttle said, this means those working in the community shouldn't be automatically classified as bad people.

"None of them's bad," he said. "Made a bad choice, that's it."

According to the news release, the driver of the vehicle was in a silver or gray four-door sedan with Kentucky registration plates bearing a Nelson County decal.

Anyone with information about this or other crimes is asked to call Campbellsville Police at 465-4122.

October: Cyber Security Awareness Month

To protect against other risks, such as identity theft and scams, he warns Internet users to simply use common sense.

"If it sounds like a deal is too good to be true, it usually is," Hazlette said. "These hackers and pirates send out emails pretending to be the IRS or tell you you've won a big prize with the hopes that some unsuspecting person will read it and get excited and give whatever personal information they ask for."

Hazlette said that anytime someone makes a financial transaction online, they should look at the web address to make sure it says "https" because the "s" means it is a secure server.

According to Julia Turpin, director of the Taylor County Public Library, Internet users of any age or skill level are at risk of being a victim of a cyber crime.

"People who think they are computer savvy are sometimes at a higher risk because they may not be as on alert as a beginner might be."

She advises users to install virus protection software on their computers and make sure they keep it updated because new viruses are created every day.

Turpin said people are often too trusting of online retailers and enter their credit card information without giving it a second thought.

"While stores like Walmart and Target are pretty much certain to be safe, if you're not familiar with a company, I would be hesitant to order online from them," she said.

Turpin also raised concerns about the safety of social networking sites and cautioned against sharing too much information.

"If you put on Facebook that you're going on vacation in Florida for two weeks and someone knows where you live, that could make you a target [of a break-in]," Turpin said. To educate the public keeping being safe while online, the library will host an Internet safety course at 2 p.m. on Oct. 17. State Police Trooper Billy Gregory will speak.

Local woman injured in two-vehicle crash

A Campbellsville woman was injured Thursday in a two-vehicle crash on U.S. 68.

According to a Taylor County Sheriff's Office news release, Melony Cundiff, 44, of 200 Bridlewood Park in Campbellsville, was traveling west on U.S. 68 at 4:40 p.m.

Kelsay Barnes, 83, of 75 Whitlock Road in Campbellsville, was following Cundiff in a 1991 Toyota pickup.

Barnes told sheriff's deputies that she didn't notice that Cundiff had stopped and struck her 2011 Buick Regal in the rear.

Campbellsville/Taylor County EMS personnel treated Cundiff at the scene and then transported her to Taylor Regional Hospital. She was treated and released.

Barnes was not injured in the collision.

One injured in two-vehicle crash

A Liberty woman was injured Wednesday in a two-vehicle crash on KY 70.

According to a Taylor County Sheriff's Office report, Sharleen Rodgers, 56, was driving a 2004 Jeep west on KY 70 at 6:40 a.m.

Rodney K. Cox, 55, of Campbellsville, was driving a 2000 Ford Explorer with a utility trailer west.

The report states that Rodgers struck the driver's side of Cox's trailer. She then crossed the westbound lane and left the roadway. She struck an embankment and tree and then came to rest in a field.

Campbellsville/Taylor County EMS personnel transported Rodgers to Taylor Regional Hospital for treatment. She was treated and released.

Cox was not injured in the collision.

Taylor County Sheriff's Deputy Mark Dickens investigated.

Campbellsville High School used six interceptions and 11 defensive plays for negative yardage to post a 48-6 home-field district triumph over Lynn Camp on Friday night.

The Eagles (2-6) took the lead for good when Zach Durham's 51-yard pass to Dra Thornton set up a Josh Roe 21-yard TD burst and the first of six Bradley Bates' point-after-touchdown kicks.

The Purple and Gold defense then took over with Durham intercepting a pass on the CHS 10-yard line and scampering 90 yards to pay dirt.

Less than two minutes later, Durham had another theft and returned it to the one-yard line with teammate Eric Lamer picking up the loose pigskin and

Mercer sprints past Taylor County 72-31 as Cardinals finish district play at 0-4

Turpin, Bright each rush for over 90 yards and combine for five TC TDs

DAVID CHEWNING
Football Correspondent

Taylor County traveled to Harrodsburg Friday looking to secure a playoff spot. The Mercer County Titans had other ideas and quickly made their mark on the contest posting 34 first-quarter points on their way to a 72-31 triumph.

The Titans tallied on five of six possessions by using quick strikes, ranging from 35 to 68 yards.

The Cardinals managed to answer Mercer County's 14-0 early surge when Dylan Bright scored from a yard out at the 5:58 mark. However, it took just over one minute for the Titans to stretch the lead. James Johnson scored the second of five his five TDs (from 60 yards) followed up by a Cardinals interception on their first play from scrimmage.

Two plays later Drew Davis connected with Russell Sims for 68 yards and the Titans were out in front 27-7.

The Cardinal offense sputtered once again going three and out before Davis again went to the air, this time finding Stetson Cooley for a 68-yard score.

Mercer County took full advantage of seven Cardinal miscues on the evening, converting all drives following turnovers into points.

Daulton Turpin brought some life to his team with an 80-yard kick-off return and a 19-yard TD reception from Hunter Christie, but the Cardinals trailed 47-19 at the half.

Bright and Johnson traded scores in the third period as the teams played to a draw for that frame.

Mercer County would post two more scores in the fourth quarter to close out the 41-point win. Senior James Johnson paced the Titans with 251 yards rushing and five touchdowns.

Turpin and Bright each had solid nights as both rushed for over 90 yards and accounted for all the Cardinal points.

The Cardinals (4-4) close out the season with non-district games at Barren County on Friday and at home against Hart County on Oct. 26.

Taylor County will compete in its 10th straight regional tournament tomorrow at Marion County. The Lady Cardinals, who are coached by Stephen Zink, will play Green County in tomorrow's second game. First-round games on Monday will pit Marion County vs. LaRue County and Central Hardin against Nelson County while Bethlehem battles Elizabethtown in Tuesday's first game. The semi-finals are set for Wednesday with the championship encounter slated for Thursday.

CAMPBELLVILLE UNIVERSITY FALL SPORTS

Lady Tigers' volleyball team upset at Indiana Southeast in five-set match

A back-and-forth match went the way of Indiana University Southeast Thursday night as Campbellsville University's three-match win streak was snapped in a five-set road loss (21-25, 25-21, 16-25, 25-20, 11-15).

The non-conference loss comes two days after Campbellsville racked up a three-set sweep at Lindsey Wilson College to move into a second-place tie in the Mid-South Conference.

In the first set, the Grenadiers took advantage of two CU errors and a pair of kills from Kristyn Maymon to break a 5-5 tie. Campbellsville never closed the four-point margin, as IUS took a 25-21 victory to start the match.

IUS was looking at a 2-0 lead after leading for most of the second set. The Lady Tigers trailed, 14-7, but rallied to even the score, 19-19, with a kill from Laura DeGear. CU gained the lead off an attack by Kelly Moyer. The two kills sparked a 7-2 rally for Campbellsville to even the match with a 25-21 second set win.

The third set consisted of three early lead changes before IUS began to pull away with a 7-1 run en route to a 25-16 win. However, Campbellsville controlled set four from the start. Moyer set the tone with a kill on the first point and sealed the win with the 25th point in a 25-20 win.

It was the second-straight year CU forced a fifth set at IUS, but also the second time in as many years IUS pulled off the upset at home.

CU rallied back from a 7-3 deficit to flip the court with an 8-7 lead. The Lady Tigers gained an 11-9 lead, but did not score again, as Emily Knight and Coral Maybrier combined for four of the Grenadier's next six points to seal the win and avenge an August loss at Campbellsville.

Sara Schum led all players with 19 kills for IUS while Rinata Aisena and DeGear had 11 and 10 kills for CU. Jackie Schweiger led CU in assists with 28. Kira Stewart assisted 15 of CU's points.

CU (18-7) returns to Mid-South Conference play Tuesday at the University of the Cumberlands.

JV Tiger hoops' squad triumphs in season opener

The season opener for the Campbellsville University junior varsity men's basketball season was a good one for the Tigers on Thursday with a 79-64 home-court win.

Campbellsville used a strong bench effort from first-year player Brandon Britt to spark the offense. Britt finished the game with a team-high 14 points, which included a one-handed slam dunk in the first half.

Campbellsville's starters combined for a total of 38 points while the bench totaled 41. Second-year players Austin Spaulding (12) and Thomas Ball (11) also finished with double-digit points.

The Cougars' Marlon Dotson led all scorers with 16. The JV Tigers will take to the court again on Tuesday (8:00) when they host Georgetown in the Powell Athletic Center.

scoring on the next play from scrimmage for a 21-0 Campbellsville cushion.
The visiting Wildcats scored on the second play of the second quarter when junior quarterback Aaron Mills tallied from four yards out.
Hayden Webb's 46-yard run set up Thornton's six-yard touchdown before the Eagle defense returned to the forefront. (Webb totaled a team-high 72 yards on the ground and led CHS in tackles with eight.)
Kendon Young picked off a Mills' pass and when virtually untouched down the left sideline for a 52-yard TD.
Campbellsville added a touchdown each of the third and fourth frames.
Quarterback sacks by Grant Adams and Deston Ford set up a Durham keeper for a 17-yard score.
Another Ford sack and a deflected punt preceded Young's 20-yard TD run on a reverse with 10:39 left in the tilt.
Durham finished with three interceptions while Young had two picks and his fellow freshman Tavon Hunter had one.
The Eagles host Berea (2-6) this Friday with a road trip to Fort Knox on Oct. 26 closing out regular-season play.
The play-offs are scheduled to begin Nov. 2.

CU hosts presidential election forum

Discuss debt, economy, health care

MARY KUTTER
Campbellsville University

“Let’s face it. Debates matter,” Trey Grayson, director of the Institute of Politics at The John F. Kennedy School of Government, Harvard University and past Kentucky Secretary of State, said at Campbellsville University on Oct. 9.

Grayson was one of three officials who spoke at the Kentucky Heartland Institute on Public Policies’ “2012 Presidential Election Forum.”

Also participating were Colmon Elridge, executive assistant to Kentucky Gov. Steve Beshear, director of the White House FaithBased Initiatives and executive vice president of Young Democrats of America, and Jeffery Scott Jennings, senior advisor of the Romney campaign in Ohio, past senior advisor of the George W. Bush 2004 campaign in New Mexico, director of strategic development and senior strategist for Peritus Public Relations in Louisville, special assistant to President George W. Bush and deputy director of the Office of Political Affairs.

The event was moderated by John Chowning, vice president for church and external relations and executive assistant to the president at CU, founder of KHIPP.

Grayson said, “[President Barack] Obama was leading in the polls until the first debate. Mitt Romney explained himself and his ideas [at the debate] in such a way that he had never done before.”

Grayson offered a nonpartisan overview of the presidential election, speaking of Obama and Romney’s strong and weak points. He discussed the recent history of re-election campaigns saying, “When you look at presidents running for re-election, generally they get re-elected. But no president has ever been re-elected since [Franklin Delano Roosevelt] with unemployment this high.”

“President Obama inherited a bad economy,” Elridge said, defending the president’s financial record, “but four million plus jobs have been created and 95 percent of Americans have received a tax cut from this president.”

Pointing to the clear difference between Obama and Romney, Elridge said the Democratic Party believes in being involved with businesses, education and health care.

Elridge told the audience how he grew up poor and lost his father at a young age. He said that the ideals of the Democratic Party helped him through educational opportunities.

“I am living proof that it actually works,” Elridge said.

“There’s the question of whether the ‘American Dream’ will continue to be a reality of our future or a relic of our past,” Elridge said. “As I look at this presidential election, I think Obama should be able to fight for these ideals for another four years.”

Jennings represented Romney and the Republican Party. The Kentucky native said that the ever-expanding government is crushing job creation. He said at the beginning of his address, “The unemployment rate is unacceptable.”

Jennings claimed much of unemployment is due to the policies of the president that are stifling energy production and regulating small businesses to levels where business owners cannot compete in the marketplace.

“We are in a close race today because Obama broke his most important promise, fixing our financial crisis,” Jennings said. “He has only crushed jobs and people’s hopes.”

“Mitt Romney’s candidacy is about getting people back to work,” Jennings said. “Mitt Romney is going to fix this situation with his five-point plan.”

Romney’s five-point plan includes energy independence by increasing access to domestic energy resources, eliminating regulations destroying the coal industry, approving the Keystone XL pipeline and streamline permitting for exploration and development.

“It is not acceptable that we are falling behind in the world with reading and math,” Jennings said, moving to the second point of Romney’s plan, which is improving education. “We should empower teachers and parents first, and teachers’ unions second.”

Curtailing unfair trade practices of countries like China and strengthening free enterprise around the world was the third point Jennings made on Romney’s behalf.

“Obama said it’s unpatriotic to add to the debt,” Jennings said when discussing the fourth point being to cut the deficit. “Now we are six trillion more in debt after he has been in office.”

For the fifth point of the plan, Jennings spoke of championing small businesses through reforming the tax code and reducing regulation on small businesses.

In a rebuttal after Jennings’ points, Elridge said Obama’s accomplishments in office were done almost entirely without the help of Congress.

“The Republican Congress’ number one priority was not to help the American people but to make Obama a one-term president.”

Jennings said in response that Obama had a Democratic Senate and House of Representatives for his first two years in the Oval Office.

When the two discussed some of Obama’s controversial decisions while in office, such as the Affordable Healthcare Act

(Obamacare), Elridge said, “What I have admired about this president is that he doesn’t view his term in office in terms of getting re-elected. My grandmother would always tell me right is always right. It may not be easy, but it is always right.”

Directing the discussion back to the economy, Jennings said, “Twenty-three million Americans can’t find a job. Forty-seven million are on food stamps. Unemployment went down last week because so many people have stopped looking for work.”

“We must build an economy by strengthening the middle class,” Elridge said in disagreement to what he called a “trickle-down economy” that he believes the Republic Party wants. “It’s about setting priorities,” he said.

Concluding his speaking, Jennings posed the question to undecided voters, “What kind of country do I want to live in?”

Grayson closed the forum saying, “There are essentially three candidates in this presidential election: Barack Obama, Mitt Romney and staying at home.

“If you want to see change in our country, I encourage you to come out and vote. It does make a difference.”

Computer: Free software available

Pickard discussed the software with magistrates at the regular Taylor County Fiscal Court meeting last Tuesday.

Pickard said the sheriff's office has received many calls about how parents can monitor their children's Internet use, especially since he discussed the issue with magistrates at their July meeting.

In July, Pickard told magistrates that the office uses equipment to investigate online crimes and has sent several people to prison with the software. He also said the sheriff's office plans to offer training for parents so they can learn how to monitor their children's Internet use.

At last week's meeting, Pickard said an updated version of Computer Cop software will soon be available and he wants to purchase copies to give to Taylor County parents.

He said he has searched for a software program that leans toward monitoring more than spying. The Computer Cop software, he said, is the only one that can be distributed for free.

The software, which can be used on PC and Macintosh computers, allows parents to search computers for photos and keywords by key words, from drug to sexually explicit terms. Parents can also add their own terms in the software's dictionary, such as terms to search for alcohol use or plans to run away from home.

Once a computer installed with the Computer Cop software is booted, he said, the software begins to log activity and can email that activity to parents.

Pickard said he believes the software will allow deputies to prevent crime, and therefore spend less time fighting it.

For example, Pickard said, a child chatting with someone online they believe to be a 17-year-old could be enticed to run away to meet that person. The Computer Cop software, he said, could possibly alert parents of the situation.

"We can prevent it right then without it even happening," Pickard said.

The Computer Cop software costs $49 per copy, he said, but the sheriff's office can buy it for $5 each at a minimum of 1,000 copies.

Pickard said the office doesn't know if 1,000 copies will be enough, but it will be a good start. He said he would like the county to purchase the software, at a cost of $5,000, and allow the sheriff's office to reimburse the county with its excess fees at the end of its budget year. Pickard said sheriff's office staff members have agreed to offer training for parents on their own time at no cost to the county.

He said the sheriff's office intends to advertise upcoming software training dates via school newsletters, media outlets and its new Facebook page.

Magistrate Richard Phillips asked who will receive a copy of the software.

Pickard said he wants to offer the software to Taylor County residents who have children. He said criteria will have to be established and some proof will have to be presented to receive the software.

Magistrate John Gaines asked how sheriff's office staff members will know the software is being used. Pickard said there is no way to know that, though he hopes parents will come to training classes and learn to use it.

Gaines said coming to the training could be a requirement to receive the software. He asked Pickard if he has enough time to do trainings.

"I will make time," Pickard said. "If we do more preventing, we might could do less enforcement."

Taylor County Sheriff Allen Newton said that once the 1,000 copies have been given away, the office could do some fundraising or solicit donations to buy more.

Gaines asked if the software can be used to monitor cellular phones.

Pickard said it can, if the phone is plugged into a computer. Once the device is plugged into the computer, he said, the software will scan it.

"It's a little sneaky," Pickard said.

And though it is, he said, he did lots of research to be sure that the software can't be used to spy on someone.

Phillips said he believes the software is a good idea.

"Most of us in here, our kids are smarter than us on the computer," he said.

He said sheriff's office staff members could discuss the software at school PTA meetings and upcoming Halloween events, both of which he said are heavily attended by parents.

Pickard said that judging by the number of calls he received after discussing the issue with magistrates in July, the office likely won't have to do much publicity to get word to the public.

Phillips made a motion for the county to purchase the software and be reimbursed at a later date. Magistrate James Jones seconded the motion, which was unanimously approved.

After the meeting, Pickard said he hopes to have the software within a month and begin offering training by the end of the year or the first of next year.

Presidency: Obama, Romney face off way," the site states. "The president has put forward a specific, balanced plan of spending cuts and revenue increases that reduces the deficit by more than $4 trillion over the next decade, including $1 trillion in spending cuts he signed into law last summer as part of a deal with Congressional Republicans."

"His plan includes $2.50 in spending cuts for every dollar in revenue increases, while bringing annual domestic spending as a share of the economy to its lowest level in 50 years."

Obama has ended the war in Iraq, the site states, and will end the war in Afghanistan in 2014.

"The President's plan uses half the money we're no longer spending on war to put Americans back to work rebuilding roads, bridges, runways and schools here at home and uses the other half to help pay down the debt."

Obama wants to end government subsidies for oil companies and invest in cleaner sources, according to his website.

"An unprecedented boom in domestic production has led to cheaper natural gas, and President Obama will take every possible action to safely develop this abundant source of American energy to support more than 600,000 jobs by the end of the decade," the site states.

"U.S. oil production is at a 14-year high, and President Obama has charted a course to cut net oil imports in half between 2008 and 2020, lowering imports by 5.5 million barrels per day and reducing our reliance on foreign oil to its lowest level in almost three decades."

Obama says he wants to lead the world in college graduates by 2020.

To help students better afford a college education, the website states, Obama ended billions in subsidies on banks and used savings to double investments in Pell Grants. He established a college tax credit for students and their families worth up to $10,000 for four years of college.

The site states that Obama has set a goal to cut the growth of college tuition and fees in half over the next 10 years and proposed bringing community colleges and businesses together to train 2 million Americans for jobs that actually exist now and are waiting to be filled.

Obama wants to expand access to health care and lower its cost.

"Millions of Americans are already benefiting from Obamacare," the site states.

"From insurance rebates to expanded coverage, see how the President's health reform benefits you."

"The health care law that President Obama passed makes the health insurance system work better for everyone. It stops insurance companies from arbitrarily capping and canceling our coverage, and provides access to recommended preventive care without co-pays or deductibles. It strengthens Medicare for our seniors and it helps young people get the health insurance they need."

Mitt Romney

Romney's campaign website, www.mittromney.com, states that he has a plan to turn the economy around and deliver more jobs to American families.

"While President Obama continues looking to big government spending programs as the solution to the nation's challenges, Mitt understands that it is hardworking Americans in the private sector who will achieve economic growth and job creation," the website states.

"His plan will end the middle class squeeze of declining incomes and rising prices, bring back prosperity, and create 12 million jobs during his first term."

The first step of his five-part plan is to achieve energy independence by 2020.

"America is blessed with extraordinary natural resources, and developing them will create millions of good jobs - not only in the energy industry, but also in industries like manufacturing that will benefit from more energy at lower prices. America's economy will boom when the billions of dollars we send overseas for our oil are kept here at home instead."

Part two is to focus on trade that works for America.

"Mitt believes that trade can offer enormous opportunities for American businesses and workers, but only if they are given a level playing field on which they can compete and win. That is why he will work to open new markets for American goods and services, while also confronting nations like China that cheat on trade and steal American jobs."

The site states that part three of the five-part plan is to provide Americans with skills they need to succeed through better public school systems and access to higher education and retraining programs that help to match unemployed workers with real-world job opportunities.

The next to last part of Romney's plan, according to the site, is to cut the deficit, reduce the size of government and get the national debt under control so that "America remains a place where businesses want to open up shop and hire."

Lastly, the final part of the plan is to champion small business.

"Small businesses are the engine of job creation in this country, but they will struggle to succeed if taxes and regulations are too burdensome, or if a government in Washington does its best to stifle them," the site states. "Mitt will pursue comprehensive tax reform that lowers tax rates for all Americans, and he will cut back on the red tape that drives up costs and discourages hiring."
